

RPGNET

THE INSIDE SCOOP ON GAMING

"Everything a gamer would want to know is right at their fingertips."

— Mark Arsenault, Gold Rush Games

RPGnet, a favorite resource of gamers and industry insiders alike, is kicking things up a notch. With numerous young, new companies emerging on the RPG scene, an Internet authority on the gaming scene is more important than ever. That's why Sandy & Emma Antunes have joined forces with Skotos Tech and Wizard's Attic to expand and improve RPG.net.

RAMP IT UP!

Sandy & Emma Antunes, Wizards Attic, and Skotos Tech have agreed to work together in partnership to create a new, expanded version of RPGnet.

"RPG.net. Like the title page says, this really is the inside scoop on gaming. If you want to be the gamer in your town who knows what's really going on, best put this on your Favorites list. I know it's on mine!"

— Peter D. Adkison, Founder, Wizards of the Coast.

Sandy Antunes, renowned for his insightful articles on getting a new game company up and running, will continue his editorial role, as will the current RPGnet volunteer staff. They will be joined by Allan Sugarbaker (of Wizard's Attic), the founder of the Unplugged section at Gamers.com. Allan will be helping ease Sandy's workload and assisting in site improvements.

Skotos Tech will continue to provide tech support for the site, and also will provide exciting new technology and services to help expand RPGnet. Chats and numerous customizable gamer pages will be just some of the new features.

Wizard's Attic brings their shipping expertise to the mix, keeping product reviews flowing, and will also help produce new Industry-related RPGnet content.

"RPGnet was of great assistance in helping me get started with Misguided Games. The advice in 'Sandy's Soapbox' was key in getting my feet under me, and I frequently suggest that others who are considering getting into the game biz read that column before they do anything else. It has also been a great forum to tell consumers about who we are and what we are doing."

— Lewis Pollak, Misguided Games, Inc.

UNITE AND CONQUER.

Numerous game companies will be adding to the RPGnet community by offering comprehensive web content. They will keep you up to date on their news and products; event calendars will tell you when and where to meet the companies in person.

"If Sandy and Emma Antunes had not existed, the adventure game industry would have found it necessary to invent them. The proliferation of RPG information on the internet that has helped begin the current renaissance in creativity and diversity in the industry owes much to them and to their creation. If there has ever been a single essential bookmark for anyone interested in the industry, it is RPGnet."

— Guy McLimore, MicroTactix Games

Our massive review database will continue to grow, as will our chat and forum sections. Meaningful surveys will ask for your opinion on a variety of relevant topics. Daily columns will remain independent and fresh, while one-shot articles will highlight special gaming events or topics.

New Chat Theatres, powered by the proven gaming engine of Skotos Tech, will offer gamers the ability to truly roleplay online in real time, with various themed chatrooms. You'll choose an alternate persona and interact in places far away and long ago.

The existing ability to create your own RPGnet look and feel will be boosted with MyRPGnet pages. You will be able to choose which companies you want to keep an eye on, highlight events you plan to attend, and filter out news to get the juiciest info. Use your MyRPG.net page to manage your gaming interests efficiently, bringing all the choice tidbits directly to your dinner table.

GAME ON!

RPGnet already sends you into the gaming fray armed with the best news, advice, discussion, and industry information you can find on the web — and we're getting better. The new team members joining RPGnet are excited about the bright future for the hobby and will explore it with the zeal and vigor you've come to expect. Actually, this flyer is so new we can't even begin to explain all the cool new stuff. And as always, your feedback will help us be better and faster, and still remain free!

"Free RPG sites on the internet tend to run from horrible to simply laughable. RPGnet is one of the few I trust to have constantly updated news and content, and to use that information to intelligent effect. Sandy Antunes' columns are the best source of information on getting involved in the small-press side of the RPG industry I've seen on the web. RPGnet is an important resource for getting instant feedback from gaming fans straight to the industry and vice versa."

— Alex Knapik, Atlas Games

For more information,
feel free to contact:
Sandy (sandy@rpg.net)
Shannon (shannon@skotos.net)
Allan (sven@rpg.net)
Eric (wizard@wizards-attic.com)